I frequently browse the website Reddit and have been a subscriber to the subreddit r/spotify for several years. If you are unfamiliar with Reddit please refer to: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Reddit. I thought that the r/spotify subreddit would be a great source of data for finding issues that users experience while using Spotify as a good number of posts focus on that.

I read through the most upvoted posts on r/spotify from the past month and found the most frequently brought up Spotify user experience issues posted on there. I limited it to posts that had at least 150 upvotes because I figured the 22 issues I found were a good amount for this project.

Here are the results of the project - (Note that "upvotes" are equivalent to the amount of other Reddit users that agree with the particular post or comment):

The most frequently brought up Spotify user experience issues posted on r/spotify subreddit within the last month

Reddit Upvotes	Reddit posts are marked in a yellow box while the comments are marked in a red box (the yellow-boxed posts will have more upvotes than the red-boxed comments because of increased visibility)
614	Spotify app crashes frequently (mainly on iOS and Android but also desktop)
601	Users frequently complain about the loading times being very slow mainly on the mobile app but also the desktop version in some instances
601	Users want sort and filter options for playlists on Android and iOS to be brought back
601	Android users request that the app displays what song you are listening to when you go to "Edit Playlist"
601	To be able to remove the current song from the playlist on the listen screen instead of having to scroll and find it manually
601	When playing an audiobook have it automatically save the location of where you are at in the audiobook
340 post / 254 comment	Users request more variation with the playback of different songs in playlists when "shuffle" mode is on. "Shuffle" mode seems to play the top and newly added songs more often than the other songs in the playlist lower down and older.
